Admirable Invention!

PATENT SELF HEATING

SMOOTHING IRON!

MANY important improvements have been made since the beginning of the present century, relieving and facilitating the labor of men by machinery and other modern implements, but females have been nearly neglected until the introduction of the Patent Self Heating Smoothing Iron, which will relieve them, in a very great degree, from the excessive and fatiguing labor of ironing besides being a great saving of time and expense. This iron combines economy, convenience, saving of labor, and despatch, one cents worth of dry charcoal stamped fuel for whole days constant ironing. Hard wood coal from the stove will answer the same purpose. It can be used in any room or in the open air. Hatters' and Tailors Irons are constructed upon the same principle and possess equal superiority.

PROFESSOR ALEX. C. BARRY'S

or Medicated Compound,

FOR beautifying, improving, and preserving the Hair, curing cuts bruises burns stings, removing nature and all irritations of the skin. A preparation the sale of which amounts to one million of bottles annually, would seem to need no advertisement, but as the thousands who purchase and approve of it have probably no idea of the enormous extent of the business done by Professor Barry, he gives herewith a plain statement of facts derived from his books, and with them renders his earnest and hearty thanks to his innumerable patrons.

Professor Barry's accounts of sales for the year 1852, show that during that year about 900 000 bottles of his Tricopherous were disposed of and that the cash product of this immense sale was nearly $100 000.

This plain unvarnished tale is a better commentary on the value of the article than any thing its inventor could say. If it were no peerless in its effect upon the hair—if it were not invaluable as a household remedy for cuts, bruises burns skin diseases, &c—it would not of course be so universally in demand. The wealthy portion of the public would buy it at any price but Professor Barry has reduced it to a figure so low that the poorest can avail themselves of its benefits.

Sold in large bottles (price 25 cents) at wholesale and retail at the manufactory and depot 137 Broadway, New York and by the principal merchants and druggists throughout the United States and Canada, Mexico, West Indies, Great Britain France, &c.

TESTIMONIALS

The following certificate from Dr John C. Warren, of Boston was given 17 years since. Let will speak for itself.

Boston Jan 5 1853.

Having had occasion to observe that some persons afflicted with Hernia have suffered much from the want of a skilful workman in accommodating a Truss to the peculiarities of their cases I have kept up to inform myself of the competency of Mr J. F. Foster in supplying the deficiency occasioned by the death of Mr Beath—After some months of observation of his work I am well satisfied that Mr Foster is well acquainted with the manufacture of these instruments, and I can with the utmost safety to the variety of cases which occur recommend him to my patients and I recommend the public in a personal manner to supply their wants in regard to these important articles.

JOHN C. WARREN M. D.

The undersigned take great pleasure in recommending to the favorable consideration of the sick who are unhappily afflicted with Hernia Mr James Frederick Foster as a skilful and the most perfect person in the manufacture and fitting of Trusses. We have employed him (some for over twenty years) and it gives us pleasure to speak from personal knowledge of his abilities. His early training and long experience in the business and the large number of individuals whom he has relieved are a variety of reasons entitle him in our opinion to be of not superior to any manufacturer of the article. His father Dr C. Gideon Foster (Dartmouth) was master of the art in his day and many hundreds of twenty years ago during which period Mr Foster aided and assisted his father in the art and manufacture of Trusses to a great variety of cases with great success, some of which were of a very complicated character.

Hernia Men—Down to all who have occasion to wear a Truss that its great excellence consists in its adaptation to the body, at the same time relieving the part. Any ordinary mechanic can make a Truss but none but a skilful practitioner can apply it to the high benefit of mankind. Ruptures radically cured in a short time.

Our experience has convinced us that Mr Foster is thoroughly attached to his business. Hence the [illegible] Dr J. C. Warren and other eminent surgeons with whom he has had occasion fully sustain the opinion we here express.

No. XXX.

THEBES, WESTERN BANK OF THE NILE.

MESSRS EDITORS:—On Saturday, the nineteenth of February we arrived at Thebes. We moored our boat on the western side of the river. The river flows on as beautiful as ever. The spreading sycamore shades its banks. The mountains are seen in the distance. But where is the mighty city?

Early on Monday morning, after our arrival, we made preparations for the mountains,—the locality of temples, and of the Theban tombs. The sun rose. It was the sun of Egypt—a cloudless and living radiance in a clear blue sky more clear and deep and vast even than the sky, of Italy. A breeze from the north cooled the air. The shore, as we left the boat, was lined with men and donkeys. I found myself in the midst of a crowd, clamorous in an unknown tongue,—each vociferating and urging his claims; I was somewhat perplexed in the midst of this confusion. But seeing a feeble old man at a little distance, who seemed to be thrust aside by his younger competitors, I made my way to him and placed my hand on the donkey's saddle. The younger Arabs looked disappointed. The old man's donkey was not as good as theirs. But very soon, seeming to appreciate my feelings, they murmured their approbation.

As I held my hand on the saddle, looking at the varying countenances of the crowd, I felt it timidly and gently held from the other side. It was the pressure of the hand of a little girl, who seemed to say with a half beseeching, half grateful look—We are poor, take our donkey, though the saddle is not very good. The old man smiled at this innocent manifestations of blind earnestness, and gave me to understand, that the young girl was his daughter and would drive the donkey to the mountains. I was entirely satisfied.

We made our way through the centre of an Arab village. The dogs barked and the goats and kids looked down from the flat roofs of the houses. The little girl, to whose protection the old man had consigned me, had a small stick in her hand, with which she rather gently excited her authority over the donkey. They appeared to understand each other very well. She wore a loose garment of blue cotton. Her feet were bare, but she was adorned with the necklace and earrings of which the poorest Arab girl will not willingly be destitute.

After leaving the village we passed two miles or more over the plain, taking the direction of the statue of Memnon. There were groups of people raising water from the reservoirs of the Nile, and pouring it into the stures which conveyed it over the rich soil. Camels and oxen and flocks were feeding. On one side was the ploughman, on the other the reaper. On going through a dry channel, through which the Nile flows when the water is high, we passed a blind man. My little girl, who sympathized in his affliction, gave me to understand that he was a suitable object of my charity. He was affectionately attended and led about by a young woman, whom I supposed to be his daughter. My little attendant, who was almost daily passing and repassing this part of the plain, seemed to be well acquainted with her.

The plain of Thebes is wonderful. I gazed upon it from one of the mountain heights, and also from the top of one of the temples of Carnac. From both places the eye easily reached its limits as they are defined by the mountains, though it is a circuit apparently of forty miles. As viewed from the ascent in the mountains, the flowing Nile, seen through the whole length of the plain and glittering in the sun flowed through it like a river of gold. The plain waved with luxuriant vegetation. It is not surprising, that the first inhabitants, who viewed it in its primitive beauty, made it their stopping place, and laid the foundations of the great city. Thebes, unlike the cities of the east generally, had no walls. In the time of its greatness it probably occupied the whole plain. Reaching out from both banks of the Nile, it was guarded on all sides by vast deserts, and also by the continuous line of mountains which intervened between the plain and the deserts. It had but little need, therefore, of walls. The hundred gates of Thebes mentioned by Homer were not gates as is commonly supposed, which furnished an entrance through city wall, but the gates of palaces and temples. And the Theban gate which is thus commemorated in early poetry, is not a mere portal, through which a man can scarcely enter, but a great architectural and historical arch, some fifty or sixty feet high, which in its proportions, sculptures, and massive boldness, leaves Greece and Rome behind.

We were three days in the plain and mountains of Western Thebes. I mention what we saw during these successive days—arranging it in the order suggested by the nature of the objects, rather than by that of the specific day or hour in which they were seen. I shall give but part, however, in the present letter.

We first came to the statue of Memnon; and we had opportunity to examine it again on another day. It stands at the extremity of the plain and at the foot of the Lybian height, sculptured from the solid rock with a care which preserves grandeur without violating truth and simplicity, rising from the base of the pedestal to the height of sixty feet and with head and breast and shoulders and hands and feet all in proportion to the height, it had the appearance, as it rose up suddenly before us, of some mysterious and mighty apparition,—holding as it were the gate of the mountains and keeping the guardianship of temples and tombs.

The statue of Memnon is only one among many which formerly existed here. Another of equal size, but not of equal celebrity, is standing near, and others at no great distance in mighty fragments like fallen giants with their limbs dislocated lie prostrate upon the ground. This statue is the one, so often alluded to by the ancient writers, which was said to welcome with notes of music the first bright rays of the rising sun. We had the opportunity of listening to the sounds which probably gave rise to this interesting fiction. They are produced by striking on a hollow portion of the stone in the lap of the statue, which has the peculiarity of emitting a sharp metallic sound, like that of brass when it is struck. The statue is seated, and is so large that the boy who ascended it and went to the furthest part of the lap for the purpose of producing the sounds, was entirely out of sight, so that the statue itself seemed to have the power of uttering them.

Leaving the statue of Memnon, we next came to a place called Medeenet Haboo—the Arabic name given to a portion of the plain of Thebes, on the western side of the river. Among the ruins which are found here, are the remains of the great "temple palace," as it has sometimes been denominated, of Remeses III. There were other ruins around, some of them of Roman origin, but our attention was particularly directed to this. We were perplexed at first in forming a satisfactory idea of the plan of this great work. Our guides furnished us but little assistance. But we were able, after a time, and with some little effort, to ascertain as we thought, the general outlines and position, with successive entrances and courts, and thus, with what still remained of massive walls and splendid columns, to fill up mentally the original and grand conception.

This temple, which was the abode of royalty as well as of the Egyptian gods, may justly be regarded in its objects the style of its architecture, and its hieroglyphical sculptures, as one of the great monuments of primitive Egypt. Some of its columns are more than twenty feet in circumference. The scenes, deeply sculptured with great skill on the walls, are chiefly battle scenes. Remeses is represented in one place as putting to rout his Asiatic enemies, who are in full armor, but in flight before him, and in another as smiting the captives taken in war in the presence of the god Amunre. War then as now, when prosecuted successfully, constituted glory. There are some scenes, however, of a more domestic nature. Among the sculptures, for instance, on the walls of the private apartments of this edifice, is a representation of Remeses seated on an elegant divan, surrounded with female attendants who wave their fans before him, and present him with flowers.

In another place he is represented as seated on a canopied throne, which is borne by twelve Egyptian princes, and attended by officers who carry in their hands the royal insignia, and arms.

This temple or "temple-palace," dates back in its origin to the reign of its builder, Remeses III. This king began to reign in the year

1235 before the Christian era; about three hundred years after the time of Moses.

There are interesting ruins at the Arab village called Goorneh or Koorneh, which is nearly opposite Karnac and not far from the bank of the river;—especially the remains of a large and beautiful temple older than the one I have mentioned. These remains are scattered over a large extent of ground and bear the evidences of mechanical skill, as well as of sublime conception, which generally characterize the architectural remains found in this region. And not far from these ruins are other fragmentary remains of a temple, which dates back to the time of the third Thothmes, the contemporary of Moses. But I found myself still more interested by the ruins generally but perhaps incorrectly known as the MEMNONIUM, which are found between Medeenet Haboo and Koorneh.

The temple, which bears this name, was originally entered through the opening in the vast pyramidal towers, built of massive stone and covered with sculptures, which still stand as the magnificent front of the large area or court which first opens behind them. This court, which is more than two hundred feet in length, by an hundred and eighty in breadth, was originally ornamented with a double row of columns on each side, some fragments of which only remain now. This large area opens into another court or area, a little smaller in size, which had lateral corridors of large circular columns. There were also rows of pillars of a different form at the northern and southern extremities of this court. The second court connects itself with a third, an hundred feet in length; covered with a solid roof, painted of a light blue color and studded with stars. Forty-eight large columns of great beauty supported the roof, many of which are still standing, as also a considerable number of those in the second court. The twelve central columns in the third court are thirty-two feet in height and twenty-one in circumference. Some of the columns are prostrate. The remains of pedestals and statues are strewed around them.

The surfaces of these remarkable ruins are covered with hieroglyphical and other sculptures. Many of them seem to be historical in their character. Towns are taken, chiefs are led captive with ropes about their necks. In one place a town, favorably situated on a rocky eminence, is defended with obstinacy but at length overcome. Those, who are able to interpret the hieroglyphical characters, state that the towns were taken in the fourth year of Remesses II., who was styled the great. He is the same with the Sesostris of the Greek historians. There are other sculptures of a different character. Some represent religious ceremonies. In one place is a procession of the sons and daughters of that Remesses.

One of the most remarkable things here is the statue of Rameses Sesostris. It lies near the entrance of the second court, prostrate and broken. Its estimated weight is a little less than one hundred tons. It is sculptured from a single block of granite. Those who have investigated the subject, inform us, that it was overthrown by the Persian king Cambyses, when he overran and conquered Egypt, so that it may be said to have taken a nation's strength to erect it, and a nation's strength to throw it down. The king in the Egyptian idea of government, represented the State; and the statue which was erected in his honor, may be said to have embodied the king. And as I stood beside the mighty fragments, and saw the head severed from the body and the face prostrate and hidden in the dust, I seemed to be looking upon a fallen empire.

I am a "stranger and a pilgrim" in the land, a sojourner of a few days; and can see but little, but I have already seen more than I was prepared for. I can understand now better than I once could, why Greece, in her desire to obtain knowledge, came to Egypt. But where Egypt received her high civilization, and under what exquisite instruments it was developed, is still a problem. Of the fact of such civilization, including both knowledge and art, the numerous monuments which still remain, leave no doubt. So far as I could perceive, as I looked upon the standing or fallen statues and columns, and upon the numberless beautiful sculptures on the walls, and upon the paintings still fresh and distinct, they exhibited all the attributes of just conception and finished execution, which constitute excellence in art. Of course, as there were many hands employed, there are different degrees of excellence. And it is true also, that the Egyptian idea of the outward or formal representation of works of art is different from that of the Greeks and Romans. Beauty is infinitely varied. Of all the numberless works of the Creator no two are entirely alike,—and the power of genius is seen in retaining the essence and divinity of the thing (that which is its life and character,) under a variety of forms. The eye of the Egyptian artist is oriental; and accustomed to scenery and life which are found in a tropical clime, it is filled with the forms of oriental beauty. And that is not all which is to be said. What Egypt was, and what she was as an entire effect, is not to be estimated by European ideas, nor by the specimens of Egyptian architecture, which are to be found from time to time in Europe and America. She is to be judged not only in connection with her oriental position which gives a character to her works, but from her own items and her own soil.

What have seen of these ruins is only the beginning. I can say nothing further at present. I will only add that new forms of life are generated or take up their abode amidst destruction. I did not see the moss and the ivy growing upon the wall, as on the ruins of Italy and England. But these are not the only signs of change. What were once the palaces of kings or the temples of heathen deities have other inhabitants now. Aroused by the noise of our coming, a hoard thrust his head from a hole in a column. Countless birds flew around us from the crevices in the walls. A flock of sheep and goats came in from the plain, and reposed themselves in the shade of the towers and of the fallen statue of Remeses. Groups of Arabs were seated on the massy fragments. The noise of children echoed through the way.

My associate, who added science to taste and industry, took measurements and made notes. I sat down on a broken column and meditated. It is thus that the works of man perish. Among human works there seemed to me to be nothing greater than that which I then witnessed, but that which is greatest in grandeur is greatest also in desolation. But nature lives, because the life of God is in it. There is beauty in the Theban plains. There is grandeur in the Theban mountains. Truth lives also, because truth cannot be by separated from eternity. Love lives, because without love truth ceases to be beautiful, and because without love to give it life, eternity itself becomes an infinite wilderness of desolations. Desolation therefore, speaks. Its language is, that every thing which is not of truth and love, is false,—false in position and false in nature. And every thing which is false, though in its power and pride it may call art and genius to its aid, only builds its own tomb. Man learns wisdom in the midst of ruins.

I was aroused from these contemplations by my little donkey girl, who pointed to the setting sun and had began to think of her father's humble home.

Bradford, Aug 8, 1853.

THE GAME HAS BEEN PLAYED TOO STRONGLY.

The loco presses were have striven to deceive the people as to the real position of Mr. Pilsbury upon the Maine Law, have carried the matter a little too far; and by their often repeated declarations, that the nominee of Mr. Pilsbury involved no issue regarding the Maine Law, they have compelled the opponents of this law to demand that Mr. Pilsbury shall declare openly, now that he is nominated, the sentiments he gave out to his nomination, and which secured to him that nomination.

The Portland Expositor, the anti Maine law organ, would have taken Mr. Pilsbury on his original pledges and well known sentiments and hab s, but when his friends so pertinaciously insist, however falsely, that the issue against the Maine Law was not considered in the Convention, and had nothing to do with the nomination, those who have stood foremost as opposers of the Maine law, do not like the position into which they are thrust, and will not abide the reputation of that barter ess agitator which they so vehemently protested—they demand to be set right against the misrepresentations of the friends of Mr Pilsbury, and under the circumstances, they have a right to demand this, though we can hardly think that any intelligent man in the State can be deceived as to the fact of Mr. Pilsbury's being opposed to the Maine law, and his silence is only to be attributed to the cowardly fear of the people at the ballot box. He could speak and give pledges, and make a show of liquors before the delegates to the Convention, in order to receive a nomination but before the people he is dumb

The Portland Expositor, with all its things of Mr. Pilsbury has been forced to think in this style.

"We have reached a crisis!" says the Argus "and the crisis must be manfully met!"

If we had not reached a crisis in the canvass for Mr. Pilsbury, the Argus has certainly made one and this crisis shall be manfully met. No more dumb Arguses, and no more dumb Pilsbury men, and no more a dumb anti Pilsbury man we say. Let the crisis be manfully met.

And what is this crisis? The Argus says

"The charge is directly made, that Mr. Pilsbury is opposed to the Maine Liquor Law; but not the first declaration has been adduced to sustain the charge."

Now it is true for us to say, that the claim made at the Bangor Convention, by Mr. Pilsbury's friends—viz, "1st By Mr. Pilsbury himself, in person, and in writing, of decided and unqualified opposition on his part, to the Maine liquor law, not only to the first law, but to the second law, and to both of these laws, was the merit, the GREAT SON BELLONO MERIT, that was put forth to secure his nomination through the votes of the Liberals in Convention and the influence of their friends out of the Convention.

Upon this they were appealed to, not only by words and by speeches, but also by written authority under Mr. Pilsbury's own signature, going the whole length of outer condemnation of both the first and the second law, and promising that in the English language could embody more emphatic expressions of condemnation, than that often embodied, he was ready to concur in it.

Why does the Argus, the Age and their confederate wire pullers, or rather wo l pullers, in the Democratic ranks, now attempt to brazen down with denunciation, the Chandler men of last year, because they claim to have Mr. Pilsbury as emphatic before the people after his nomination, as he promised the Delegates in Convention of those Chandler men, before his nomination was made, that he would be?

But is it not clear as the sun on a cloudless sky, that no liberal man of any party, can consistently, or public in justice to his cause and principles, support a candidate who is made to eschew before the public the very principles which effected his nomination, and for the efficiency and support of which he was nominated? and without a pledge of honest conviction in their behalf he never could have been nominated for Governor?

Our cause, it is argued, is good enough to secure a nomination upon, but is not good enough to rest an election upon before the people!

Out upon such cheating, jesuitical politics. We never will go shoulder to shoulder for a set of principles or a cause that needs to be veiled like a harlot in the streets.

We now reiterate our earnest desire to see Mr. Pilsbury permitted by his party advisers and friends, to put himself in the same open, bold, manly, and honest ground he before the people, that our Chandler friends and delegates in the Bangor Convention, not only saw him, but were benefited, nay, saved to see him, before that Convention.

We speak not—we have not spoken without "book" in this matter—nor without proof."

GREAT FIRE IN NEW YORK.

The Pear Street House, a large hotel, seven stories high extending from Pearl to Water St. has been burnt. It was valued at $40,000 Insured. The basement was occupied for stores. Whole loss estimated at $200,000.

The Newburyport Herald is pleased to learn that Rev. Wm. Horton has received an invitation to the Rectorship of St. Paul's church (Episcopal) in that city.

☞ The steamer Pacific has arrived at New York. Her detention was caused by the breaking of her main shaft, thus disabling one of her wheels.

Concert Repeated on this evening.

The very beautiful Concert, the Coronation of the Rose, given last evening under the direction of Mr. Ilsley, is to be repeated this evening, and we hope to a full house. Mr. Ilsley has great skill in musical matters, and that skill has been most happily exhibited in this city in the preparation for this concert.

It is not often that our people have so much pleasure afforded to them as that furnished last evening in the Rose and Lilly by Misses Danforth and Patten, the Crocus by Miss Fairfield, the Dahlia by Miss Mitchell, the Heliotrope and Mignionette by Misses Brown and Crosby, the Jasmine by Miss Brown, the Sunflower by Miss Patten, the Violet and Lily by Misses Patten and Bailey, the Rose by Miss Danforth, the Tulip by Miss Brad ord, the Nightingale and Rose by Miss Danforth and the Flute, the Hollyhock by Miss Bailey, &c. These sweet singers are all to be heard again on this evening, sweet voiced and attractive. We have only space left to advise all lovers of music and of the beautiful, to attend.

☞ The Portland State of Maine well says in reference to the enterprises in Maine that "our people are gradually getting their minds prepared for the great changes which our railway system is already working out in Maine. If we in our policy, we shall soon become independent of the markets of Boston and New York. Our exports of lumber, of shoes, of lime, and other great staples, cannot be essential for a long time to come; and if we will only manufacture for ourselves what we buy elsewhere, and import directly from Europe, what this continent cannot produce, we should soon be the richest State in the Union.

Our connection with the capitalists of Europe by means of our railway system, will enable Maine to act a leading part in the business of the continent."

The most extensive preparations are making at St. John for the great Railway demonstration of the 14th of September. A large number of guests from Canada, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward's Island, and the United States, are expected.

☞ It is said that President Pierce does not favor the policy of committing the Administration to the project of a Pacific Railroad. The speeches of Cushing and Davis look the other way.

☞ The Whig Convention for Oxford County met at South Paris, on Friday last. Enoch W. Woodbury of Sweden, and W. W. Virgin of Norway, were nominated for Senators.

☞ The Crystal Palace, on Monday evening, was illuminated, by way of experiment. The effect was extremely beautiful and pleasing.

The Board fixed upon a commodious location for the building in Main street a few rods west of the monumental to the memory of the seven young Danvers heroes who fell in the battles of Lexington and Concord, and nearly opposite the building in which the great orator in his earlier years commenced in the humble capacity of a grocer's boy.

ANOTHER GREAT CAVE IN KENTUCKY.—Mr G P. McLane, of Mississippi and others, parties, explored a cave last week in Muhlenburg county, about ten miles south of Greenville. The cave was first discovered last winter by a person who tracked several racoons into it. Mr. McLane and his companions went in, as they supposed, about two miles when they came to a pit which they could not pass for the want of a ladder but they saw that the cave extended beyond. While traveling the two miles they discovered eight or ten branches leading off in different directions some of them apparently larger than the avenue. A partial monkey, as perfect in shape as if it were alive, was found in the cave some weeks ago, and we understand that it has been sent to the World's Fair in New York.

CAN THE ETHIOPIAN CHANGE HIS SKIN.—Dr Hood, of Whiteville, Gal, describes a white negro woman near him, 34 years of age, the mother of ten ebony children, whose skin since she was 11 years of age, has changed from a pure black to a white as fair as any of Caucasian blood, her eyes and hair retain the the African peculiarities. No diseased condition of the skin or system has been discovered to allow cause for this change of color, which began upon her forehead in a small spot, and gradually affected her whole body the black disappearing from her neck downwards in a single week after her face had become entirely white.

EXTENT OF ENGLISH COMMERCE. England is so deeply engaged in manufactures, that she brings a large portion of her breadstuffs and provisions, as well as the raw material for her manufactures from every part of the world. During the first twenty-seven weeks of the present year, the importation of flour and wheat alone, into the ports of Great Britain, was equal to 16,104,752 bushels wheat. This quantity was brought from forty eight different ports, in all climates. The list begins with the north port of Russia, (Archangel,) and ends with Peru. It includes almost every European State—includes Egypt and the west of Africa, the Philippine Islands and the Brazils, Australia, and the United States of North America.

Woman and Flowers.

The editor of the Louisville Journal has a very readable article under this head, from which we cut the closing paragraph. It is full of the true poetry of natural and refined sentiments:

"Blessings on the heads of those who send flowery presents to those whose energies have been desolated by disease! Flowers apart not only fragrance and beauty to one's sick room, but they absolutely light up the gloom that hangs around it like a dark curtain, and cause cheerfulness to take the place of heaviness and oppression of heart. Often has our soul felt exceedingly grateful to those dear women who have considered our low estate and sent flowers, fresh, fragrant, and beautiful, to cheer our invalidism. Could we strew their pathway through life with flowers, how dearly would our hand perform the task! Had flowers no other office than to minister to the pleasures of the sick, that of itself would be reason sufficient why they should be cultivated. But when we remember that they are not only an ever pleasant joy to the eye, but are also true and genial teachers of moral truth and excellence, as well as tender prompters to the highest as well as the most refined sentiments, we can perceive of how great importance it is that the hand and heart of woman's power is in her loveliness, and she ought to do every thing to encourage it. Her loveliness has broken the bondage in which many a sinful man was bound and which had resisted persuasion, and once through many a year. Let her increase her power by adding to her loveliness, and thus she will not fail to do if she gives her heart up to a love of the beautiful poetry of earth."

UNEUAL MILITARY MOVEMENT. We understand that orders have been issued from Head Quarters for the concentration of a large military force along the line of the Rio Grande—The whole of the 1st Regiment of Mounted Riflemen, eight companies of the 5th, and eight companies of the 8th Infantry, and five companies of Artillery, are ordered to that border. Some of these troops are already in Texas—Nothing of the cause of these movements can be gathered from the order, but it may be taken for granted that the Government has good reason for it, which will be made public in proper time.

We hear from the Rio Grande that a marked change has recently taken place in the relations of the Mexican and American affairs on that frontier. Formerly they were very courteous and familiar, now, on the part of the Mexicans, it is reserved, and confined only to such ceremonies as are absolutely necessary. Santa Anna, it is reported, was recruiting his army to ninety-one thousand men. What does it all foreboded?—St. Louis Republican, 15th.

A CURIOUS SNAKE.—Mr Alfred Wight, of Casco, yesterday, showed us a curious young snake with two perfect heads. The snake was one of a nest of ten little ones captured by a younger brother of Mr Wight, about a fort night since, and of the "striped snake" race—was judged to be about a foot long old when captured, and was alive, brisk and lively as the others. There is nothing about it peculiar, except its two heads. The body appears perfect, and each head of it is perfect—both being joined to the body like the head of any other snake, and each turning out slightly, the one to the right and the other to the left, so as not to interfere with each other. Cut off either head, and cover over the wound with skin, and you have the common striped snake.—Portland Advertiser.

Hillman's Pills an Effectual Cure for Dropsy.—Extract of a letter from Mr. Hillman, of Hanover, dated May 1, 1851. "I was for 12 years—from 12 to 24 years of age was severely afflicted with dropsy, so that my feet and legs were so much swollen that I was unable to walk. I consulted many doctors and tried every remedy, with little or no obtaining relief, but was disappointed in all, until I tried your invaluable pills, which I gratefully acknowledge have been the sole means of bringing a cure of my complaint, and I am now in the enjoyment of excellent health."

Great Excitement!
Among Carriage Makers.

THE subscribers have purchased the right to make, use and sell for the Counties of Penobscot, Piscataquis, Waldo, Hancock, Washington and Aroostook. The advantages of the above Coupling, over the old method of connecting the main part of the Carriage with the front part, is such that it must come into general use when it is properly understood. High forward wheels can be used, and we get rid of the galling irons, as the wheels do not strike the body, and the carriage turns in a very small compass, the hind wheels not describing more than 4 to 6 feet circle. It is perfectly simple, and not so liable to get out of order as the old method. Those who have used the above are fully satisfied of its utility, as certificates below show. It can be attached to old carriages at a small expense, and we are prepared to sell the right for shops, towns, and would sell a part of the above named Counties, at such a rate that any smart man, with a small capital could realize a great profit from the sale of the above. Any person wishing information will receive immediate attention at our place of business, or by dropping us a line by mail, post-paid.

Everett's Patent Coupling

We have leave to refer to Messrs I. B. Norcross, Chase & Littlefield, and C. S. Coe, Esq., who are using the same. D. W. MORRILL & CO.

Yankees can, and do, beat all creation in every thing they attempt. DR. MORSE'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL!

FOR GENITAL INFIRMITY IMPOTENCY IN CONJUNCTION OR SOLITARY EMISSIONS &c The astonishing success which has attended this invaluable medicine, for Loss of Muscular Energy, Physical Lassitude and General Prostration, or, in fact the consequences of youthful indiscretion, or indulgence of the passions in riper years, renders it the most valuable preparation ever discovered In fact no remedy for the above complaints at such moderate cost and alone There is no other effectable remedy, for any that has authentic testimonials received the sanction of the Medical Faculty The WONDERFUL VEGETABLE PRODUCTION of which this medicine is composed has been tested and its virtues proclaimed by hundreds of families of the Faculty of London, Paris, and the chief cities of Europe, as well as by numerous Divines in this city It is the only infallible remedy for NERVOUS, HEAD and MIND COMPLAINTS—the mind prey so long sought for and never before found The invigorating cordial can administer to MIND DISEASES It will remove all nervous affections DEPRESSION EXCITEMENT unfitness for study or business loss of MEMORY CONFUSION in mind of Self Distrust, fear of society &c It will restore to health and renew the youth of those who have destroyed it by Spa and Lucrative Credit practices It has been used by some Physicians, Clergymen &c, with success in all the above cases This improves on the first

DR MORSE'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL has, and is constantly doing these complaints, the mental and bodily necessity of the unfortunate sufferer as the following testimony of the names related will conclusively show

Dr Woodward of the Washington Institute Hospital, writes of one of his patients being cured by using the cordial, thus — It gives me pleasure to inform you that one of my patients who I have been in vain endeavoring to cure, has received benefit from your Cordial He tells me that he has taken three or four bottles since he commenced taking it, which is the half dozen or three weeks When he applied to me, he was so thoroughly prostrated that he was ever to regain his full strength I prescribed the usual remedies for those cases in the hospital, but they had no effect In the mean time he met with one of your Cordials, which he obtained at the Drug store, and other medicine would I shall ever recommend whenever opportunity occurs"

The nature of the diseases relieved by this Cordial are generally such as to leave the public ignorant of certificates of cures out of the question, and the proprietor could produce a host of the most unexceptionable testimonials to show that the great reputation it enjoys was not entirely obtained by firmly based upon its positive and congenial virtues alone with all directions are to be found the happy parents of healthy offsprings who would not have been about for their existence if it had not been for this invaluable remedy. Add it unequally potent for many diseases for which it is recommended

THE MEDICAL JOURNALS have not in a single instance that has been authentically given their sanction to any other preparation for the above complaints It has, in many violent and desperate cases effected rapid cures after patients had been abandoned, and their condition pronounced hopeless by medical practitioners of high professional character

THE COMMON EXPRESSION Of those who have received this Cordial — I had heard you (some) highly spoken of but in some of these cases I had tried various medicines and had given up hope (different strengthening cordials) without derive any benefit I had almost given up hope of obtaining relief when I purchased one bottle of your Cordial I had not taken whatever of its contents—but have I feel stronger have had no emissions since and I think I shall cure me I am sure of the half a dozen bottles I look will cure me"

Another says — I have quitted several of unqualified physicians some and I could not be cured I have prescribed I as thus, and but but I found no relief until I procured one of your Cordial I must say it completely cured me"

Another says "I was surprised at the effect your Cordial had Why had I not heard of it before? It would save every one so much expense, besides years of health in all by suffering

CAUTION—Ask for Dr Morse's Cordial and take no other, as there are worthless imitations which mean well enough but are injurious, have brought into the market Inquire and insist that the next dealer to Pennsylvania Cordial Beware of all other Cordials &c, (and try only this)

NOTICE Persons consulting personally from causes above named may confidentially consult Dr Morse personally or by letter, (post paid) at his office 24 Bulfinch st Boston The necessary medicine and medical advice forwarded to any part of the Union by this will be safely forwarded to the writer's address
